Building Disaster Resilience for the Whole Community

By: Ben Curran, SWNA Emergency Preparedness Task Force

Ms. Peggy Keller, the director of community preparedness and resilience in the DC Department of Health, led a spirited conversation with a small group of SW community residents on Thursday, Oct. 16 at Amidon-Bowen Elementary School. The activity was held to mark International Disaster Day, which serves as a landmark date to encourage local communities to mobilize among themselves and learn more about how they can strengthen the capacity of their community to withstand the effects of potential disasters.

The Southwest Neighborhood Assembly's Youth Activities Task Force and Emergency Preparedness Task Force hosted the community discussion, and members of FEMA Corps who work at FEMA headquarters helped with the planning and logistics. FEMA Corps was created by the Obama administration to provide 10-month-long work opportunities for 18 to 24-year-olds in the field of disaster preparedness, response, and recovery.

The thrust of the discussion revolved around the differences between "disaster preparedness" and a community that is "disaster resilient". The former focuses on encouraging individuals and families to build disaster-ready kits at home, work, and in their vehicles in order to care for themselves and loved ones -- including pets -- in the immediate aftermath of a disaster before local fire and rescue can reach them, and to develop family communications plans. A "disaster resilient community" is one where community members take the initiative to meet together to discuss what the risks are in their community and what ways the community can plan together based on existing social networks to strengthen their capacity or ability to bounce back after a disaster.

What is seen increasingly around the country is that communities that meet together in a very inclusive manner to have meaningful planning discussions, organize practical disaster response training, and establish linkages to their local government emergency management offices, local Red Cross, and other voluntary agencies are far more likely to respond and recover effectively after a disaster hits their community.

The planning team worked hard to spread the word about this activity in the local community and is determined to keep this newfound momentum going as we strive together to build a strong disaster preparedness foundation in Southwest DC. Indeed, the team is inspired to be an example to other communities and neighborhoods in the District and make this great city a disaster resilient city bar none.

The following interesting link shows how this local Southwest disaster preparedness activity shows up on the United Nations International Disaster Day list of activities: <http://www.preventionweb.net/english/professional/trainings-events/events/v.php?id=39873>

Please stay tuned for follow up activities to be hosted by SWNA. Also, please take a look at the following two websites to learn more about both disaster preparedness and disaster resilience: www.ready.gov and <http://doh.dc.gov/resilience>

Amateur Radio Operator in Southwest Communicates Via Satellite

If you happen to pass by the Capitol Park Plaza building at 201 Eye St. SW some morning or evening, you might find Paul Stoetzer out in the parking lot using ham radio to communicate with other hams in the USA and overseas via any of a number of AMSAT-OSCAR (Orbital Satellites Carrying Amateur Radio). Recently, Paul was given permission to use the call letters W1AW of the ARRL, the national association for Amateur Radio, which is celebrating its centennial year. In this photo, Paul demonstrates how he communicates via satellite using a "wearable," battery-operated transmitter and receiver and a hand-held antenna.

James Bernard Cole and a friend, at right, both graduates of the Corcoran School of Art, exhibited plastic duck decoys in the Skyline Hotel pool, representing The George Washington University's recent luring of students and staff with promises of a better education.

At left, Karine Felleni's "Continuence" consisted of a line of tape formed in circles and shapes, which she created over the course of the exhibit, representing a sequential stream of movements in time.

Madeleine Cutrona's "Bargain Basement University" printed Bachelor of Arts degrees for anyone who wanted a college degree, but the certificate made it clear that it didn't guarantee the "graduate" would be able to find a job.

Moving of the Copper Beech Tree from St. Augustine's

Please enjoy these photos of the moving of the Copper Beech tree from St. Augustine's across the street to the area near the Lobsterman statue on Oct. 6. It took nearly two weeks to prepare the tree for moving, at a cost of over $100,000. The move itself took the better part of a day. The church is in the background and is scheduled for demolition to make way for a new church to replace it along with new condos.

Let Nothing Disturb You

By Pastor Ida Moss - www.MyGreaterWorks.org

In Philippians 4:6, the Apostle Paul tells us to "be anxious for nothing." But when we look at the many challenges that we face in life: uncertainty about the future, the potential for declining health, the possibility of need and lack - avoiding anxiety seems inconceivable. As difficult as it may be, Paul's words are filled with wisdom. I cannot think of a single time when worry helped to make a situation better. I am reminded of the story from the book of Exodus (ch. 16), when God fed the children of Israel with bread that rained from Heaven. It came each day for 40 years! At first, some tried to save a little for the next day - but it rotted. God wanted them to learn to trust Him day by day. Worry is caused by anticipating the future. The cure for worry is to realize that TODAY I have all I need!

'Thinking About Jazz' features DC's Own Shirley Horn

By: Brian Hamilton

The life and music of Washington, DC jazz singer and pianist Shirley Horn was the featured topic at Westminster Church's Thinking About Jazz event on Oct. 25. A panel including Horn's daughter Rainy Smith, jazz singers Jessica Boykin Settles and Jeannie Marshall, and Westminster's Jazz Night Program Director, Dick Smith, shared remembrances of her life and musicianship.

Shirley Valerie Horn was born May 1, 1934 in Washington, DC to parents who loved music and sang to each other throughout their lives. As a toddler Shirley began playing on her grandmother's piano and was given music lessons. Offered a scholarship in her teens to Juilliard, the family decided they could not afford to send her to New York, so she enrolled in the Junior Music School at DC's Howard University where she studied classical piano and became particularly fond of Sergei Rachmaninoff and Claude Debussy.

When she fell in love with jazz she said, "I loved Rachmaninoff but then Oscar Peterson became my Rachmaninoff. And Ahmad Jamal became my Debussy."

Singing entered her life when at 17, playing classical piano at a DC restaurant, a man came into the restaurant with a teddy bear and offered to give it to her if she would sing “Melancholy Baby,” and so began her career as a vocalist. She booked gigs up and down the East Coast from DC to Manhattan.

HORN

In 1960 when Miles Davis heard her first recording, Embers and Ashes, he tracked her down in DC and asked her to open for him at NY’s Village Vanguard. Davis was a mentor and friend to Horn until he died in 1991, in part because he thought her style of singing was much like the way he played trumpet – using long silences between notes and phrases known as creating “space.”

Shirley Horn’s career included recordings, movies, and personal appearances. She was known to never compromise her music or her personal life in the pursuit of fame. After the birth of her daughter Rainy, she confined her appearances to DC and Baltimore and no amount of encouragement would persuade her to spend long periods of time away from Rainy or her husband, Sheppard Deering. In 1986, she accepted a gig at Michael’s Pub in Manhattan and went on to have an international career.

During her long career, Horn recorded for Verve and Mercury records and, from 1954 on, had her own trio including drummer Steve Williams, with whom she played for 23 years, and pianist Charles Able, with whom she played for 33 years. She recorded for producer Quincy

Jones and, in addition to Miles Davis, played with Dizzy Gillespie, Toots Thielmans, Ron Carter, Wynton Marsalis, and Carmen McCrae. Horn fulfilled a life-long ambition with her final recording, Here’s to Life, with Johnny Mandel as her arranger and producer.

The panel took up the question of the impact of her decision to stay in the DC area after she married and had a child.

Following the discussion there was a period of Q&A and door prizes were offered.

Jenny's on the Southwest Waterfront

Stay Tuned for the next chapter of Jenny's on the Southwest Waterfront

Jenny's Asian Fusion is currently closed temporarily to prepare for its move to 650 Water Street, SW (previously the Channel Inn). We make this bittersweet announcement with both sadness and excitement as we say goodbye to our current location, but hope to begin the new chapter of Jenny's on the Southwest Waterfront soon. To stay tuned for what's next at Jenny's, visit:

www.jennysdc.com

<http://twitter.com/jennyswashdc>

We will provide updates on the transition to our new location and are excited to continue our legacy in Southwest DC.

Since 1983, Jenny's has called Southwest DC home and our customers are our family. Jenny's is proud to have been a part of not only our customers' biggest moments – from first dates, to weddings, to children, and everything in between but also our own as we consider Jenny's the living room that countless holidays were spent in, our family grew up in and even where our daughter was married. Thank you to all of our loyal customers, friends, and family who have supported Jenny's for over 30 years!

Most importantly, we are sincerely grateful to our dedicated employees for all of the efforts and hard work over the last three decades. We hope many of these employees will have the opportunity to rejoin us after our transition to a new location on the Southwest Waterfront.

We say farewell for now, but please stay tuned for the next chapter of Jenny's on the Southwest Waterfront. Thank you for the memories!
